THE collection of old Bristol Deeds, of which an abstract is here given, was formed many years ago by my father, Mr. George Weare Braikenridge of Brislington, Somerset, and I have thought that, if calendared, they would be more available for reference by students of local history and antiquities.

This has been most carefully and accurately done by Mr. Francis B. Bickley, of the Department of Manuscripts at the British Museum, and he has prefixed a short notice of the character of the collection. To the kindness of my friend, Mr. Reginald S. Faber, I am indebted for the subjoined Index of Names occurring in the deeds.

My original intention was simply to have a manuscript catalogue of the deeds to place with them in my library, but thinking afterwards that the object I had in view would be more fully effected by a printed catalogue, I have had these few copies struck off under Mr. Bickley's supervision.

W. JERDONE BRAIKENRIDGE.

CLAREMONT, CLEVEDON.

To modern historians, whether general or topographical, the study of original documents is considered all-essential. The excellent reports of the Historical MSS. Commission have come to the aid of the general historian by making known the State Papers and Letters in private collections. The writer on local history must, however, always be in fear lest there may be in private muniment-rooms deeds which would throw light on some knotty point, or upset some laboured theory and spoil his work. It is only by the liberality of the owners of such treasures that these documents can be made available to the writer of topographical history. Mr. W. Jerdone Braikenridge, recognising this, intrusted his valuable collection of deeds relating to Bristol to my care to be calendared, and the system I have adopted seems, from my experience, to be the one best suited to students.

Every deed has been fully described: all personal and place names have been noted, and the original spelling preserved; all rentals and tenures are given. In dating, I have contented myself with indicating the saint's day as being sufficiently close for all practical purposes.

The documents number three hundred and forty-three, of which nearly three hundred relate to Bristol, and the majority of the others to the west of England. In date they range from circ. 1200 to the eighteenth century, but less than thirty are later than the fifteenth century.

The arrangement is in two divisions: (1) those relating to Bristol; (2) the others. It was found, however, convenient to place some miscellaneous papers quite at the end.

I think there is little doubt but that the bulk of these deeds belonged to the great Bristol merchant of the fifteenth century—William Canynges—and was accumulated as the title-deeds of the large property he held.

The charters present no very uncommon features. The descent of many properties may be easily traced, and the genealogies of families carried on sometimes for several generations. The succession of the mayors, bailiffs, and other officials of the town as recorded in these deeds will be very helpful in dating similar documents.

The rentals are the very ordinary ones of a pair of white gloves (No. 8), pepper (Nos. 23, 27), 'unum clauum gariofori' (No. 43), and the rose on St. John's day.

In addition to Canynges we find many well-known Bristol names, Blanket, Ricart, Wircestre, Colston, etc.

The streets and localities add nothing to the information to be obtained from the Topography of William Wyrcestre in the fifteenth century, edited by Rev. J. Dallaway in 1834, and dedicated to Mr. G. W. Braikenridge.

Charters 8, 34, 36, furnish evidence of a connection between Bristol and Ireland in early times; and however interesting it might be to argue an Irish colony living in the 'Irishmede,' the alternative name of Rush Lane given by Wyrcestre scarcely sanctions this.

No. 288 deserves special attention. Seyer in Memoirs of Bristol, vol. ii. pp. 228, 229, notices the freeing of the gates of the city from toll in 1546. This deed throws light on the ways and means adopted for carrying out so drastic a measure.

All students will be grateful to Mr. Braikenridge for this opportunity of consulting his deeds, and for the example he sets to owners of similar collections.
